MEMBERS OF THE TASK FORCE

Richard A. Clarke is an on-air consultant for ABC News and previously served the last three presidents as special assistant to the president for global affairs, national coordinator for security and counterterrorism, and special advisor to the president for cyber security. Prior to his White House years, Clarke served for 19 years in the Pentagon, the intelligence community, and State Department. During the Reagan administration, he was deputy assistant secretary of state for intelligence. During the George H. W. Bush administration, he was assistant secretary of state for political-military affairs and coordinated diplomatic efforts to support the 1990-1991 Gulf War and the subsequent security arrangements.

Glenn P. Aga is president and co-founder of IC Associates, LLC, advising U.S. government and corporate clients on a wide range of security issues and technologies. He is a former U.S. Air Force intelligence officer with overseas crisis experience in the Middle East, Africa, and Balkans. He also served in the Clinton White House, the National Reconnaissance Office, the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research. Functionally, he has supported and applied technology for counter-terrorism operations, U.N. peacekeeping operations, and served as an analyst on global chemical and biological weapons capabilities.

Roger W. Cressey is president of Good Harbor, advising clients on homeland security, cyber-security and counterterrorism issues. He is currently an on-air counterterrorism analyst for NBC News. Previously, he served as director for transnational threats on the National Security Council staff, where he was responsible for coordination and implementation of US counterterrorism policy. During this period, he managed the U.S. government's response to the Millennium terror alert, the USS Cole attack, and the September 11 attacks. Prior to his White House service, he served in the Department of Defense, including as deputy director for war plans. From 1991 to 1995, he served in the Department of State working on Middle East security issues. He has also served overseas with the U.S. Embassy in Israel and with United Nations peacekeeping missions in Somalia and the former Yugoslavia. While in the former Yugoslavia, he was part of a United Nations team that planned the successful capture of the first individual indicted for war crimes in Croatia.

Stephen E. Flynn is the Jeane J. Kirkpatrick Senior Fellow for National Security Studies at the Council on Foreign Relations. He is a retired U.S. Coast Guard commander and foremost expert on homeland security and border control. Dr. Flynn recently served as Director and principal author for the task force report "America: Still Unprepared? Still in Danger," co-chaired by former Senators Gary Hart and Warren Rudman. He has written extensively on security issues, including his recent book, America the Vulnerable: How Our Government Is Failing to Protect Us from Terrorism.

Blake W. Mobley is a doctoral candidate specializing in counterterrorism and international relations at Georgetown University.

The Century Foundation conducts public policy research and analyses of economic, social, and foreign policy issues, including inequality, retirement security, election reform, media studies, homeland security, and international affairs. The foundation produces books, reports, and other publications, convenes task forces and working groups, and operates eight informational Web sites. With offices in New York City and Washington, D.C., The Century Foundation is nonprofit and nonpartisan and was founded in 1919 by Edward A. Filene.

Eric Rosenbach is a national security consultant for the Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs at Harvard University. He previously worked as the Chief Security Officer for the largest internet service provider in Europe, and served four years as a military intelligence officer supporting operations in the Balkans. He is a former Fulbright Scholar who studied law at Georgetown and public policy at Harvard.

Steven Simon specializes in Middle Eastern politics at the RAND Corporation. Previously, he served in London for three years as assistant director of the International Institute for Strategic Studies and Carol Deane Senior Fellow in U.S. Security Studies. He came to the IISS in November 1999 from the National Security Council staff at the White House, where he served for over five years as director for global issues and senior director for transnational threats. During this period he had coordination responsibilities for Near Eastern and South Asian security policy and counterterrorism policy and operations. He is the coauthor of The Age of Sacred Terror (Random House: 2002), which won the Council on Foreign Relations 2004 Arthur Ross Award and coeditor of Iraq at the Crossroads: State and Society in the Shadow of Regime Change (Oxford University Press/IISS 2003).

William F. Wechsler was director for transnational threats on the U.S. National Security Council during the Clinton administration. He headed a commission that looked into the sources of Osama bin Laden's money.

Lee S. Wolosky is Of Counsel at Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP and adjunct professor in international affairs at Columbia University. He served as director for transnational threats on the National Security Council under Presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush. His responsibilities included coordinating White House policy formulation, program oversight, and new initiatives related to international crime, including illicit finance affecting national security.
